Domestic Commentary

Local values were well supported through the day, with the ASX being bid at $285 and offered at $292 but with no trade to speak of. Demand for DR3 / 2 is creeping in from the exporters but to date few have been able to knuckle out a price. More grower selling as price inch higher but the higher grades remain held firmly. Big range in feed grain prices, have a good look around.

International Commentary

US futures were well supported by the funds who bought up to 2000 contracts on Friday night. Wheat production was heavily pruned by drought, and drought is also becoming a concern in China. Winter kill in the US has been a non event with leading agronomist and meteorologist expecting very little winter kill across the major growing areas of the US.

Weather:

Storms are expected to remain north of the Qld border over the next couple of days as temperatures remain stable throughout the week in the low thirties. By mid week we may see storms drift south with Wednesday being the most likely day for a scud this week.
